

➤ Natural Resources Journal

NRJ is an international, interdisciplinary forum devoted to the study of natural and environmental resources. NRJ's contributors come from various disciplines, represent many countries, and provide many approaches to the complex issues raised by the need to balance resource development and environmental concerns.

Application Process: Write-on assignment typically administered through Twen the week following spring semester final exams. The assignment includes a writing and citation portion. You may apply to NRJ and NMLR simultaneously.

- Publishes Twice Annually
- No writing assignment required
- Requires a two year commitment
- Requires approx. 5 hours of work per week
- Earn 2 credits as 2L, 4 credits as 3L, total.

Co-Requisites: Legal Research + NRJ Course

Staff are assigned editorial positions by previous boards based on preferences and strengths of each candidate.

➤ New Mexico Law Review

NMLR is New Mexico's signature legal journal, with a focus on articles of interest to practitioners in the state and throughout the Southwest. Contributing authors from across the country include law professors, attorneys, judges, and NMLR staff members, whose work is regularly selected for publication following the fall of 2L year.

- Publishes Twice Annually
- Satisfies SOL writing requirement
- Requires a two year commitment
- Requires approx. 5 hours of work per week
- Earn 4 credits as both 2L and 3L

Co-Requisites: Legal Research + NMLR Course

Staff are allocated to editorial positions through an election process.

➤ Tribal Law Journal

TLJ is the premier Indigenous law journal in the United States and is one of the few international legal journals dedicated to Indigenous and tribal law. Contributions include tribal court case comments, reflections on tribal systems, the development of tribal law, the value of tribal law, interviews, and teachings. The TLJ updates and makes available the Tribal Court Handbook annually.

There is no formal application. Members register for Law of Indigenous Peoples (LIP) in fall semester along with TLJ.

- Publishes Annually
- Satisfies SOL writing requirement
- Requires a one to two year commitment
- Requires approx. 5 hours of work per week
- Earn 2 credits as 2L, 4 credits as 3L, total.

Co-Requisites: Legal Research + LIP Course + TLJ Course

Staff are assigned editorial positions by previous board based on preferences and strengths of each candidate.